SECTION B

51. Read the passage below and then answer, in full sentences, the questions that follow.

There are many things that we can do to conserve the environment. Some are things that are encouraged by the government and some are things we can do ourselves. Deforestation is a major threat to the environment as it can leave land bare and this leads to soil erosion.

People can help to reduce the effects of deforestation by planting new trees. If a new tree is planted each time an old one is cut down then the balance will be maintained.

In Uganda, many trees and forests have been cut down over the years, so we need to plant many more trees.

The draining of swamps can also damage the environment. These swamps are found in low lying areas. They help to keep the climate cool and can be used for water supplies for farming in the dry season. We should try to conserve the swamps and their natural vegetation (papyrus and other plants).

Soil erosion is another major threat. It occurs after deforestation, land clearing and poor farming methods. To conserve soil on the hill slopes, we can build terraces so that the soil does not run down the hill after heavy rains.
